THE CHART AT A GLANCE

Wood at the center. Four forces in dialogue.

The visible stems and branches emphasize Wood, Earth, Metal, Water. Fire appears only in hidden stems. Every element is present either visibly or in hidden stems.

Reading the scale

Percentages use largest-remainder rounding and total exactly 100%. Visible counts come from non-Day stems; hidden scores use weighted branch roots. This is a structural index, not a personality test.

神煞 / SHEN SHA

Markers that add nuance, not fixed outcomes

Each marker is calculated from the natal stems and branches. It is interpreted as supporting context and never overrides the Day Master, Five Elements, or Ten-God structure.

MARKER	LOCATION	DERIVED FROM	PRACTICAL INTERPRETATION
华盖 Canopy Star	2 PLACEMENTS YEAR 戌 · DAY 戌	Day Pillar + Year Pillar	Supports specialist depth, solitude, aesthetics, and the ability to work beyond conventional opinion. Repetition increases emphasis across life contexts.
驿马 Travel Horse	2 PLACEMENTS MONTH 申 · HOUR 申	Day Pillar + Year Pillar	Adds momentum through movement, changing environments, travel, or roles that resist stagnation. Repetition increases emphasis across life contexts.

How to read this page

A marker describes a recurring symbolic tendency. Repetition can strengthen emphasis, but no single Shen Sha guarantees an event, relationship, or outcome.

01

Structure

Four Pillars and Day Master

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your Four Pillars are 甲戌 (Wood-Earth), 壬申 (Water-Metal), 甲戌 (Wood-Earth), and 壬申 (Water-Metal). The Day Master, or the central self in the chart, is the stem 甲 (Yang Wood), representing a tall, upright tree that seeks growth and structure.

Day Master: 甲, a Wood Heavenly Stem. Day Pillar and Day Master are kept distinct.

The Year Pillar 甲戌 shows your early environment and family lineage, with a Friend stem and Earth branch. The Month Pillar 壬申 governs your career and social standing, carrying an Indirect Resource stem and Metal branch. The Day Pillar 甲戌 is your own pillar, with the Day Branch 戌 serving as the Spouse Palace, indicating partnership and inner life.

The Hour Pillar 壬申 reflects your later years and legacy, again with an Indirect Resource stem and Metal branch. The Day Master 甲 is Yang Wood, which is strong, resilient, and oriented toward expansion, but it requires proper support from Water and Earth to thrive. The repeated 甲 and 壬 stems across the pillars create a pattern of self-reliance and intellectual depth, as the same elements appear in both the self and resource positions.

This repetition suggests a life theme of mastering knowledge and managing resources, with the Day Master standing at the center of a structured, repetitive chart.

Structure

Seasonal Qi and Day Master Strength

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your chart is born in the month of 申 (Metal), which is autumn, a season when Metal is at its peak and Wood is declining. The Month Branch 申 is a strong Metal element that controls Wood, meaning the Day Master 甲 faces significant 克制 (control) from the seasonal energy.

Month Branch: 申; strength is read through season, roots, support, drains, and controls.

However, the Day Master is supported by two 壬 (Water) stems in the Month and Hour Pillars, which are Indirect Resources that produce Wood. Water in autumn is abundant, as Metal generates Water, so the Resource is strong and nourishes the Day Master. Additionally, the Day Master has roots in the Earth branches 戌, which contain hidden Fire and Metal but no direct Wood support.

The visible Earth in the branches drains Wood by controlling it, but the Water stems counterbalance this by providing continuous nourishment. Overall, the Day Master is moderately strong due to the strong Resource support, but it is not overly robust because the seasonal Metal and Earth elements exert control and drainage. The chart lacks visible Fire, which would normally help Wood grow by warming the soil, so the Day Master relies heavily on Water for strength.

This creates a pattern where the self is sustained by intellectual and spiritual resources rather than direct action or external validation.

Structure

Five Elements and Hidden Stems

CORE INTERPRETATION

The visible Five Elements in your chart are Wood (2 stems), Water (2 stems), Earth (2 branches), and Metal (2 branches), with no visible Fire. The hidden stems, which are the energies stored within the Earthly Branches, add depth to this profile.

Visible leaders: Wood + Earth + Metal + Water. Hidden-only elements: Fire.

The canonical weighted Ten-God profile shows Indirect Resource (偏印) at 41%, Seven Killings (七杀) at 19%, Indirect Wealth (偏财) at 18%, Friend (比肩) at 12%, Direct Officer (正官) at 8%, and Hurting Officer (伤官) at 2%. This means the chart is dominated by Indirect Resource, which is Water, followed by Seven Killings (Metal) and Indirect Wealth (Earth). The hidden stems in the 申 branches contain Geng (Metal, Seven Killings), Ren (Water, Indirect Resource), and Wu (Earth, Indirect Wealth).

The 戌 branches contain Wu (Earth, Indirect Wealth), Xin (Metal, Direct Officer), and Ding (Fire, Hurting Officer). Fire is present only in hidden form, not visible, so it is a latent energy that can emerge in certain years or Luck Pillars. The strong Indirect Resource indicates a tendency toward deep thinking, research, and unconventional learning, while the hidden Seven Killings and Indirect Wealth suggest underlying pressures and opportunities related to authority and finances.

The absence of visible Fire means expression and creativity are not immediately obvious, requiring external triggers to activate.

Scope

04

Structure

Ten Gods in the Natal Chart

CORE INTERPRETATION

The Ten Gods in your chart are derived from the Day Master 甲. The visible stems show: Year Stem 甲 is a Friend (比肩), representing siblings, peers, and competition.

Canonical weighted Ten-God leaders: Indirect Resource 41%, Seven Killings 19%, Indirect Wealth 18%. Visible and hidden sources are listed separately.

Month Stem 壬 is an Indirect Resource (偏印), indicating unconventional wisdom, intuition, and spiritual or academic pursuits. Hour Stem 壬 is also an Indirect Resource, reinforcing this theme. The hidden stems add more Ten Gods: in the 申 branches, Geng (Metal) is Seven Killings (七杀), representing authority, challenges, and discipline; Ren (Water) is Indirect Resource; Wu (Earth) is Indirect Wealth (偏财), indicating speculative or non-salary income.

In the 戌 branches, Wu (Earth) is Indirect Wealth; Xin (Metal) is Direct Officer (正官), representing structured authority and career recognition; Ding (Fire) is Hurting Officer (伤官), linked to creativity, rebellion, and verbal expression. The dominant Indirect Resource suggests you process the world through analysis and introspection, often preferring solitary study over social interaction. The hidden Seven Killings and Direct Officer indicate a complex relationship with authority—you may respect structure but resist direct control.

The Indirect Wealth points to financial opportunities that come through risk-taking or unconventional means, while the hidden Hurting Officer can emerge as sharp wit or critical thinking when triggered.

Evidence

Chart Structure, Useful Elements, and Unfavorable Elements

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your chart structure is characterized by a strong Resource (Water) supporting a moderately strong Day Master (Wood), with Metal (Officer and Seven Killings) and Earth (Wealth) as controlling and draining elements. The seasonal Metal in autumn controls Wood, but the abundant Water transforms this control into nourishment, creating a pattern where challenges become sources of growth.

Useful and unfavorable elements must follow the stated strength and balancing logic; they are not inferred from a simple missing-element count.

The useful element for balancing this chart is Fire, which is absent visibly but present in hidden stems. Fire would warm the Water and Earth, allowing Wood to flourish and express itself through Output (食神/伤官). Fire also controls Metal, reducing the pressure from Seven Killings and Direct Officer.

The unfavorable element is additional Metal, which would over-control Wood and create excessive pressure, especially since Metal is already strong in the season. Additional Earth could also be problematic, as it drains Wood and increases the Wealth burden without sufficient Fire to manage it. Water, while supportive, can become excessive if over-supplied, leading to passivity or overthinking.

Therefore, the provisional useful elements are Fire and Wood, which strengthen the Day Master and enable expression, while Metal and Earth should be approached with caution. This analysis is based on structural balancing, but classical schools may weigh seasonal regulation differently, so it remains a candidate rather than a definitive Yong Shen.

Evidence

Stems, Branches, and Natal Interactions

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your natal chart contains no stem combinations or clashes among the visible stems, as all four stems—甲 (Wood), 壬 (Water), 甲 (Wood), and 壬 (Water)—are either the same or produce each other without direct conflict. The two 甲 stems are Friends (比肩), and the two 壬 stems are Indirect Resources (偏印), creating a pattern of self-reinforcing Wood and Water energy.

Only exact supported stem and branch relations are reported; repeats are not treated as two-member combinations.

This lack of stem clash suggests internal consistency in your core motivations, but it also means that external triggers for change often come from branches or Luck Pillars rather than from the natal stems themselves. Among the branches, the two 戌 (Earth) branches in the Year and Day Pillars are identical, forming a repeated branch pattern known as Fu Yin (伏吟). This repetition intensifies the Earth element's influence, particularly through the hidden stems of 戊 (Earth), 辛 (Metal), and 丁 (Fire).

The two 申 (Metal) branches in the Month and Hour Pillars are also identical, creating another Fu Yin pattern that amplifies Metal's presence and its hidden stems of 庚 (Metal), 壬 (Water), and 戊 (Earth). These repeated branches indicate areas of life—such as family background (Year Pillar), personal identity (Day Pillar), career environment (Month Pillar), and late-life pursuits (Hour Pillar)—where themes recur or require repeated attention. There are no branch combinations, clashes, harms, breaks, punishments, or meetings within the natal chart itself.

The 戌-戌 repetition and 申-申 repetition are the only structural interactions. This simplicity means that your chart's dynamics are largely driven by the elemental balance between Wood, Water, Earth, and Metal, with Fire absent from visible stems and branches. External interactions, such as those from Luck Pillars or annual stems, will therefore have a stronger relative impact on your life events.

Shen Sha: Secondary Symbolic Stars

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your chart carries two canonical Shen Sha (symbolic stars) that appear in multiple pillars. The first is 华盖 (Canopy Star), derived from the combination of your Day Pillar (甲戌) and Year Pillar (甲戌).

Canonical Shen Sha only, grouped by marker and shown with every natal placement on the Shen Sha table.

It appears in both the Year Branch 戌 and the Day Branch 戌. The Canopy Star traditionally indicates a person with a contemplative, solitary, or spiritually inclined nature. In practice, this often translates into a tendency to seek depth in knowledge, enjoy periods of solitude, and feel drawn to philosophy, religion, or artistic expression.

You may find that you process experiences internally before sharing them, and that you value authenticity over social conformity. The double presence of this star in both the Year and Day Pillars suggests that these traits are not situational but woven into your core identity and family background. The second Shen Sha is 驿马 (Travel Horse), derived from the same Day Pillar and Year Pillar combination.

It appears in the Month Branch 申 and the Hour Branch 申. The Travel Horse traditionally signifies movement, travel, change of location, or restlessness. In your chart, its placement in the Month Pillar (career and social environment) and Hour Pillar (later life and long-term pursuits) suggests that your professional life and personal projects may involve frequent travel, relocation, or adaptation to new environments.

You may feel restless when staying in one place for too long, and you might thrive in roles that require mobility or cross-cultural exposure. These Shen Sha are secondary to the main structural analysis. They do not override the elemental balance or Ten-God relationships, but they add nuance.

For example, the Canopy Star's introspective quality may amplify the Indirect Resource's tendency toward independent study, while the Travel Horse may moderate the stabilizing influence of the repeated 戌 branches. Treat these as tendencies to observe in your life, not as guarantees of specific events.

Application

Career and Suitable Work Environments

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your career tendencies are shaped by the dominance of Indirect Resource (偏印) in the visible stems and the strong presence of Seven Killings (七杀) and Indirect Wealth (偏财) in the hidden stems. The Indirect Resource, represented by the two 壬 (Water) stems in the Month and Hour Pillars, indicates a preference for independent, research-oriented, or specialized work.

甲 Wood Day Master, interpreted through Ten Gods, the Day Branch, and relevant natal interactions.

You are likely to excel in fields that require deep knowledge, analytical thinking, and the ability to work without constant supervision. The Seven Killings in the hidden stems add a competitive edge and a capacity to handle pressure, but they also require a structured outlet to avoid burnout. The absence of visible Fire (Output) means that direct self-expression or creative performance is not your primary career driver.

Instead, you may find satisfaction in roles that involve problem-solving, strategy, or technical expertise. The Indirect Wealth in the hidden stems suggests an ability to generate income through unconventional or entrepreneurial means, but this wealth potential is not immediately visible and may require deliberate cultivation. The repeated 申 (Metal) branches in the Month and Hour Pillars reinforce the Officer (正官) and Seven Killings energy, pointing toward careers in management, law, engineering, finance, or any field that values precision and authority.

Suitable work environments include those that offer autonomy, intellectual challenge, and a clear hierarchy or structure. You may struggle in overly collaborative or chaotic settings where roles are undefined. The Travel Horse Shen Sha in the Month and Hour Pillars suggests that your career may involve travel, relocation, or frequent changes in project scope.

Avoid roles that demand constant public visibility or emotional labor, as these drain your Indirect Resource energy. Instead, focus on positions where your expertise is valued and you can work in focused, uninterrupted blocks.

Application

Wealth Pattern and Resource Management

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your wealth pattern is dominated by Indirect Wealth (偏财) in the hidden stems, with no visible Wealth stars in the stems. The two 戌 (Earth) branches in the Year and Day Pillars contain hidden Earth, which represents Wealth, but this energy is not directly expressed.

甲 Wood Day Master, interpreted through Ten Gods, the Day Branch, and relevant natal interactions.

This configuration suggests that your financial opportunities often come through indirect channels—such as investments, side projects, commissions, or partnerships—rather than through a fixed salary. You may need to actively seek out or create wealth opportunities rather than waiting for them to appear. The Indirect Resource (偏印) in the visible stems indicates that you tend to approach money with a strategic, sometimes cautious mindset.

You are likely to research before spending, and you may prefer to build financial security through knowledge or specialized skills rather than through aggressive risk-taking. However, the hidden Seven Killings (七杀) can create pressure to achieve financial results quickly, which may lead to impulsive decisions if not balanced. Fire's hidden-only presence (Output) means that you do not naturally spend money on self-promotion or visible status symbols; your wealth management style is more conservative and long-term.

The repeated 申 (Metal) branches in the Month and Hour Pillars create a strong Officer structure, which can support wealth accumulation through disciplined work and adherence to systems. You are likely to build wealth steadily over time rather than through windfalls. The Travel Horse Shen Sha in these same branches suggests that your income sources may be geographically dispersed or require mobility.

To manage resources effectively, focus on creating multiple income streams, maintaining an emergency fund, and avoiding debt that ties you to a single location or employer. Your chart favors a patient, research-driven approach to financial growth.

Application

Relationships, Partner Star, and Spouse Palace

CORE INTERPRETATION

In your chart, the partner star for a female is the Direct Officer (正官) and Seven Killings (七杀), which represent Metal. The visible stems contain no Metal, but the hidden stems in the 申 (Metal) branches of the Month and Hour Pillars contain strong Metal energy, particularly 庚 (Metal) as Seven Killings and 辛 (Metal) as Direct Officer.

甲 Wood Day Master, interpreted through Ten Gods, the Day Branch, and relevant natal interactions.

This indicates that relationship opportunities are present but not immediately obvious; they may arise through work, travel, or social networks rather than through casual encounters. The Seven Killings energy is stronger than the Direct Officer, suggesting that you may be attracted to partners who are assertive, ambitious, or unconventional, but this can also create power dynamics that require conscious management. The Spouse Palace is the Day Branch, which is 戌 (Earth).

Earth is your Wealth element, and it contains hidden stems of 戊 (Earth), 辛 (Metal), and 丁 (Fire). The presence of Metal (Officer) within the Spouse Palace is favorable, as it indicates that your partner may have qualities of responsibility, structure, or authority. However, the Earth element itself can be stabilizing or stubborn, depending on context.

The repeated 戌 branches in the Year and Day Pillars (Fu Yin) suggest that themes from your family background may repeat in your marriage, such as expectations around duty or independence. The Canopy Star in the Day Branch adds a layer of introspection to your relationship style. You may need periods of solitude even within a partnership, and you are unlikely to tolerate superficial connections.

The Travel Horse in the Month and Hour Pillars suggests that long-distance relationships or partnerships formed during travel are possible. There are no natal clashes or harms to the Spouse Palace, which is structurally stable, but the lack of visible Fire (Output) means that emotional expression may require conscious effort. Focus on clear communication and shared goals rather than expecting your partner to intuit your needs.

Reading standard

- Calculated facts are kept separate from interpretation.

Scope

No single symbol or Shen Sha marker is treated as proof of a fixed event.

11

Application

Health Tendencies Through the Five Elements

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your chart shows a structural imbalance where Wood (甲) is supported by two Water stems (壬) but lacks visible Fire, which traditionally governs the heart, circulation, and emotional heat dissipation. The two Earth branches (戌) and two Metal branches (申) create a strong controlling influence on Wood, potentially straining the liver and nervous system, which Wood represents in Five-Element medicine.

甲 Wood Day Master, interpreted through Ten Gods, the Day Branch, and relevant natal interactions.

The hidden Fire in 戌 (戌 contains 戊, 辛, 丁) is minimal and buried, so Fire's function of regulating blood and calming the spirit is weak. This pattern suggests you may experience tension-related fatigue, cold extremities, or digestive sluggishness, as Earth (戌) can over-control Water (壬) when Metal is abundant, affecting kidney-adrenal reserves. The repeated 申 (Metal) branches amplify a cutting energy that can manifest as joint stiffness or respiratory sensitivity, especially during Metal-dominant years.

No visible Fire also implies a tendency to suppress anger or frustration rather than express it, which can accumulate as internal heat. Practically, you should prioritize moderate cardiovascular exercise to stimulate Fire circulation, avoid prolonged cold or raw foods that weaken digestive Earth, and monitor stress levels that directly impact Wood. These are lifestyle tendencies, not diagnoses; consult a medical professional for specific health concerns.

The chart does not indicate severe illness, only areas of vulnerability that respond well to seasonal adjustments and balanced routines.

Luck Pillar Direction and Starting Age

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your Luck Pillars (Da Yun) move in reverse direction because you are a female born in a Yang-stem year (甲戌, with 甲 being Yang Wood). In BaZi convention, a female in a Yang year follows the reverse order of the month-branch sequence, so your Luck Pillars retreat from the Month Pillar (壬申) backward through the earthly branches.

Luck direction: Reverse. Basis: Female birth in a Yang-stem year.

The starting age for your first Luck Pillar is 3, meaning the first ten-year cycle began at age 3 in 1997. This starting age is supplied by the calculator based on the number of days between your birth and the preceding solar term, but the exact calculation method is not required for interpretation. The reverse direction means your life phases unfold in a contracting, consolidating pattern rather than an expanding one, which suits your chart's need for internal strengthening.

Each Luck Pillar will be analyzed against your natal chart in the next section, with the understanding that reverse cycles often emphasize introspection, resource management, and gradual refinement rather than rapid external growth. The supplied starting age and direction are final and should not be recalculated.

Ten-Year Luck Pillars

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your current Luck Pillar is 己巳 (Earth-Snake), active from age 23 (2017) to age 32 (2026). 己 is Direct Wealth (Earth), which enters a chart dominated by Indirect Resource (壬) and Seven Killings (hidden 申).

Current Luck Pillar: 己巳 (2017-2026); annual contacts are shown with their natal or Luck-Pillar source.

This pillar introduces a Wealth star that is controlled by your Day Master (甲 controls Earth), but the 巳 branch contains hidden Fire (丙, 戊, 庚) that can generate Earth and clash with the abundant Water (壬). The 巳-Snake also forms a half-harmony with your natal 戌 (戌-午-巳), which can activate hidden Fire and temporarily balance the cold Metal-Water influence. During this cycle, you may experience increased financial opportunities, but the Wealth star is not strongly rooted, so income may be project-based or require active management.

The next Luck Pillar, 戊辰 (Earth-Dragon), begins at age 33 (2027) and runs until age 42 (2036). 戊 is Indirect Wealth (Earth), and 辰 is an Earth branch containing hidden Water (癸), Wood (乙), and Earth (戊). This pillar repeats the Earth element, which your Day Master controls, but the 辰 branch also stores Water that can feed the Resource stars.

This cycle may bring more stable wealth accumulation, but the Earth-heavy energy can feel heavy and require patience. The structural marker 2000 庚辰 (Metal-Dragon) emphasized a period of early responsibility, and 2060 庚辰 will repeat that pattern later in life. Each Luck Pillar should be evaluated for its interaction with your natal stems and branches, not as a guarantee of specific events.

Da Yun & Liu
NianAnnual Outlook for the Next Five Years

CORE INTERPRETATION

2026 丙午 (Fire-Horse): Active Luck Pillar 己巳. The stem 丙 (Output/Fire) clashes with your natal month and hour stems 壬 (Resource), creating a conflict between expression and introspection.

Chart basis

Current Luck Pillar: 己巳 (2017-2026); annual contacts are shown with their natal or Luck-Pillar source.

The 午 branch half-harmonizes with your natal 戌 (午-戌), activating hidden Fire. This year favors creative projects and social visibility, but the clash may cause sudden changes in work or communication. Guard against overcommitting emotionally.

2027 丁未 (Fire-Goat): Active Luck Pillar 戊辰. The stem 丁 (Output/Fire) combines with your natal 壬 (丁-壬), softening the Resource influence. The 未 branch breaks with your natal 戌 (未-戌), which can disrupt routines or relationships tied to Earth.

This year may bring endings or adjustments in living situations or partnerships. 2028 戊申 (Earth-Monkey): Active Luck Pillar 戊辰. The 申 branch repeats your natal month and hour branches, amplifying Metal (Officer/Seven Killings).

This can increase pressure from authority figures or responsibilities. The Earth stem 戊 offers some control, but the repeated Metal may feel restrictive. Focus on discipline and avoid power struggles.

2029 己酉 (Earth-Rooster): Active Luck Pillar 戊辰. The stem 己 combines with your natal 甲 (己-甲), binding the Day Master to Wealth. The 酉 branch harms your natal 戌 (酉-戌), potentially affecting partnerships or legal matters.

This year may bring financial settlements or relationship commitments, but the harm suggests hidden friction. 2030 庚戌 (Metal-Dog): Active Luck Pillar 戊辰. The stem 庚 clashes with your natal 甲 (庚-甲), a direct attack on the Day Master.

The 戌 branch repeats your natal year and day branches, intensifying Earth and hidden Fire. This is a high-pressure year requiring strong boundaries. Avoid major risks and prioritize health and stability.

Timing Priorities and Practical Summary

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your chart's core pattern is a Wood Day Master (甲) supported by abundant Water (壬) but constrained by Metal (申) and Earth (戌), with no visible Fire to release tension. The priority is to strengthen Wood's roots and introduce controlled Fire for expression and circulation.

Current Luck Pillar: 己巳 (2017-2026); annual contacts are shown with their natal or Luck-Pillar source.

The next five years (2026-2030) show a mix of Output opportunities (2026-2027) and Metal-Earth pressure (2028-2030). The best timing for advancement is 2026-2027, when Fire is active and can harmonize with your Resource stars. Use these years to launch projects, build visibility, and address emotional backlog.

From 2028 onward, the repeated Metal and Earth demand a defensive posture: protect your energy, avoid overcommitment, and focus on consolidation rather than expansion. The Shen Sha markers—华盖 (Canopy Star) in 戌 (year and day pillars) and 驿马 (Travel Horse) in 申 (month and hour pillars)—reinforce a tendency toward solitude, research, and frequent movement or career changes. The Canopy Star suggests you benefit from periods of withdrawal and study, while the Travel Horse indicates that change, travel, or relocation can break stagnation.

Do not treat these markers as guarantees; they are secondary lenses. Your Luck Pillar shift to 戊辰 in 2027 marks a new Earth-heavy phase that will test your patience and resource management. The structural marker 2000 庚辰 was a formative period of pressure; 2060 庚辰 will revisit similar themes.

In summary, advance during Fire years, steady during Earth years, and protect your foundation during Metal years.

Reading standard

- Traditional BaZi terms are retained and explained in English.
- Calculated facts are kept separate from interpretation.

Scope

No single symbol or Shen Sha marker is treated as proof of a fixed event.

Calculation basis and reading limits

This report was generated by Tengyunzi's AI interpretation system from calculated chart data. It is not represented as a report written personally by Tengyunzi.

The report follows standard BaZi order: season and Day Master strength first, then Five Elements, Ten Gods, chart structure, life topics, and timing. Interpretation remains conditional rather than a guarantee of events. The recorded birth time of 16:00 is included, so the Hour Pillar is part of the structural analysis.

01 Birth input

Gregorian civil date · Asia/Taipei · birthplace not supplied

02 Chart source

Four Pillars and Luck Pillars supplied by the Tengyunzi calculation engine; solar-time correction is not applied without birthplace data.

03 Ten-God weighting

Visible non-Day stems weight 1.0. Hidden branch stems use 60/30/10 weighting, adjusted by pillar position.

04 Shen Sha scope

Supported canonical markers only. They remain secondary to Day Master, Five Elements, and Ten-God structure.

Important

This report is for educational and reflective purposes. It is not medical, legal, financial, or mental-health advice, and it does not guarantee future events.
