神煞 / SHEN SHA

Markers that add nuance, not fixed outcomes

Each marker is calculated from the natal stems and branches. It is interpreted as supporting context and never overrides the Day Master, Five Elements, or Ten-God structure.

MARKER	LOCATION	DERIVED FROM	PRACTICAL INTERPRETATION
华盖 Canopy Star	2 PLACEMENTS YEAR 戌 · DAY 戌	Day Pillar + Year Pillar	Supports specialist depth, solitude, aesthetics, and the ability to work beyond conventional opinion. Repetition increases emphasis across life contexts.
驿马 Travel Horse	2 PLACEMENTS MONTH 申 · HOUR 申	Day Pillar + Year Pillar	Adds momentum through movement, changing environments, travel, or roles that resist stagnation. Repetition increases emphasis across life contexts.

How to read this page

A marker describes a recurring symbolic tendency. Repetition can strengthen emphasis, but no single Shen Sha guarantees an event, relationship, or outcome.

01

Structure

Four Pillars and Day Master

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your Four Pillars are 甲戌 (Wood-Earth), 壬申 (Water-Metal), 甲戌 (Wood-Earth), and 壬申 (Water-Metal). The Day Master, or the stem of the Day Pillar, is 甲 (Yang Wood), representing you.

Chart basis

Day Master: 甲, a Wood Heavenly Stem. Day Pillar and Day Master are kept distinct.

Yang Wood is the tall tree, the pillar, the straight and upward-growing force. In your chart, this 甲 Wood appears twice: once in the Year Pillar and once as the Day Master itself. The Year Pillar represents your early environment and family background, the Month Pillar governs your youth and career foundation, the Day Pillar covers your self and spouse, and the Hour Pillar points to your later years and children.

Your chart has a strong structural repetition: the Year and Day Pillars are identical (甲戌), and the Month and Hour Pillars are identical (壬申). This creates a pattern of symmetry and reinforcement, suggesting that certain themes—such as resourcefulness, independence, and a need for control over your environment—will repeat across different life stages. The Day Master 甲 Wood sits on a 戌 Earth branch, which contains hidden Fire and Metal, adding complexity to your core identity.

Structure

Seasonal Qi and Day Master Strength

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your Month Pillar is 申 (Metal), which corresponds to the eighth month of the lunar calendar, late summer to early autumn. In this season, Metal is in full strength, and Wood is declining because autumn Metal cuts and restrains Wood.

Month Branch: 申; strength is read through season, roots, support, drains, and controls.

The Day Master 甲 Wood is born in a season where it is naturally weakened. However, your chart provides significant support: two 壬 (Yang Water) stems in the Month and Hour Pillars act as Indirect Resource (偏印), producing Wood by nourishing it. Water is the element that generates Wood, so these two Water stems are like rain or underground springs feeding the tree.

Additionally, the 申 branches contain hidden Water (壬), further reinforcing this resource. Despite the seasonal weakness, the Day Master has strong resource support from Water, making it moderately strong overall. The Earth branches (戌) in the Year and Day Pillars represent Wealth (Earth), which Wood controls, but they also drain the Day Master by requiring effort to manage.

The Metal in the 申 branches represents Officer and Seven Killings, which restrain Wood. So the Day Master is not overwhelmingly strong; it relies on the Water resources to stay balanced. The chart lacks visible Fire, which would normally help Wood grow and express itself, so the Day Master's strength is more internal and reserved than outwardly expansive.

Structure

Five Elements and Hidden Stems

CORE INTERPRETATION

The visible Five Elements in your chart are: Wood (2 stems: 甲, 甲), Water (2 stems: 壬, 壬), Earth (2 branches: 戌, 戌), Metal (2 branches: 申, 申), and Fire (0 visible). The hidden stems, which are the energies stored within the Earthly Branches, add nuance.

Each 戌 branch contains hidden 戊 (Yang Earth), 辛 (Yin Metal), and 丁 (Yin Fire). Each 申 branch contains hidden 庚 (Yang Metal), 壬 (Yang Water), and 戊 (Yang Earth). So Fire is present only in hidden form (丁 in 戌), not visible on the surface.

This means Fire is not absent but is subdued and internal. The canonical weighted Ten-God profile shows Indirect Resource (偏印) at 41%, Seven Killings (七杀) at 19%, Indirect Wealth (偏财) at 18%, Friend (比肩) at 12%, Direct Officer (正官) at 8%, and Hurting Officer (伤官) at 2%. The dominance of Indirect Resource indicates a strong tendency toward introspection, learning, and unconventional thinking.

Seven Killings and Indirect Wealth are also significant, suggesting a competitive edge and a drive for financial independence. The low Hurting Officer means creative expression is not a primary outlet. The hidden Fire (丁) as Hurting Officer is minimal, so emotional expression may be restrained.

The visible Water and Wood dominate the surface, while Earth and Metal are more structural in the branches.

04

Structure

Ten Gods in the Natal Chart

CORE INTERPRETATION

The Ten Gods (十神) map the relationships between the Day Master and the other stems and hidden stems. Your visible Ten Gods are: Year Stem 甲 is a Friend (比肩), meaning a peer or sibling energy that supports you but can also compete.

Canonical weighted Ten-God leaders: Indirect Resource 41%, Seven Killings 19%, Indirect Wealth 18%. Visible and hidden sources are listed separately.

Month Stem 壬 is Indirect Resource (偏印), representing unconventional wisdom, study, and spiritual or technical knowledge. Hour Stem 壬 is also Indirect Resource, doubling this influence. The hidden stems add: in the 戌 branches, 戊 is Indirect Wealth (偏财), indicating financial opportunities from non-traditional sources; 辛 is Direct Officer (正官), representing structure, authority, and discipline; and 丁 is Hurting Officer (伤官), which can be creative or rebellious but is weak here.

In the 申 branches, 庚 is Seven Killings (七杀), a powerful and challenging authority figure or competitive pressure; 壬 is again Indirect Resource; and 戊 is again Indirect Wealth. The profile shows that Indirect Resource is your strongest Ten God, meaning you process the world through analysis, research, and a preference for depth over breadth. Seven Killings and Indirect Wealth are next, giving you a mix of ambition and a need to overcome obstacles.

The Friend energy is moderate, so you can collaborate but may also feel competitive with peers. Direct Officer is present but not dominant, so formal structures are respected but not your primary driver.

05

Evidence

Chart Structure, Useful Elements, and Unfavorable Elements

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your chart forms a pattern of repeated pillars: two 甲戌 and two 壬申. This structure emphasizes stability and reinforcement but also creates a risk of rigidity.

Useful and unfavorable elements must follow the stated strength and balancing logic; they are not inferred from a simple missing-element count.

The Day Master 甲 Wood is supported by abundant Water (Resource), but the season (autumn Metal) and the Earth branches (Wealth) create a need for balance. The useful elements for structural balance are Fire and Wood. Fire (Output) would help the Wood express itself, warm the chart, and control the excessive Metal (Seven Killings).

Wood (Companion) would strengthen the Day Master against the restraining Metal and draining Earth. The unfavorable elements are Metal and Earth. Metal (Officer and Seven Killings) already restrains the Wood heavily, and adding more Metal could overwhelm the Day Master.

Earth (Wealth) drains the Day Master's energy, and too much Earth could make you overwork for financial gain without sufficient return. Water, while supportive, is already abundant; adding more Water could make the chart too passive or overly reliant on internal resources. Since no definitive Yong Shen (useful god) is supplied, this is a provisional balancing analysis.

Classical schools might prioritize Fire to regulate the Metal and activate the hidden Fire, or Wood to reinforce the Day Master. The key is to avoid strengthening Metal or Earth excessively.

06

Evidence

Stems, Branches, and Natal Interactions

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your natal chart contains two notable structural features: the repeated pillar pattern and the absence of combinations or clashes. The Year and Day Pillars are both 甲戌 (Wood-Earth), and the Month and Hour Pillars are both 壬申 (Water-Metal).

Only exact supported stem and branch relations are reported; repeats are not treated as two-member combinations.

This creates a double-pillar repetition, which in BaZi is called a "repeated pillar" or "伏吟" (fu yin) when identical pillars appear. The repetition of 甲戌 in the Year and Day Pillars emphasizes the Day Master's self-reliance and the Earth Wealth star's presence in both the early family environment and the spouse palace. The repetition of 壬申 in the Month and Hour Pillars strengthens the Indirect Resource (偏印) influence, meaning Water's supportive yet detached energy is doubled in your career and later-life sectors.

No visible combinations (合) occur between the stems or branches in the natal chart. The 申 (Monkey) branches do not combine with 戌 (Dog) branches because they are not in a direct combination cycle—申 combines with 子 (Rat) and 辰 (Dragon), while 戌 combines with 卯 (Rabbit) and 午 (Horse). No clashes (冲) are present either, as 戌 does not clash with 申 (戌 clashes with 辰, and 申 clashes with 寅).

The absence of clashes suggests fewer sudden disruptions in relationships or career shifts from the natal structure alone, though external Luck Pillars and annual stems can still introduce clashes later. The repeated pillars create a sense of internal consistency but also potential rigidity, as the same energies appear twice, reinforcing patterns of intellectual detachment (Indirect Resource) and material focus (Wealth). In practical terms, you may find yourself revisiting similar life themes—such as balancing solitary study with financial responsibilities—across different life stages.

The lack of natal combinations means your chart relies heavily on external timing (Luck Pillars and annual stems) to activate change, so periods with combination triggers will feel more significant.

Evidence

Shen Sha: Secondary Symbolic Stars

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your chart carries two canonical Shen Sha markers: the Canopy Star (华盖) and the Travel Horse (驿马). The Canopy Star appears in both the Year Pillar (戌) and the Day Pillar (戌), derived from the Day Pillar and Year Pillar combination.

Canonical Shen Sha only, grouped by marker and shown with every natal placement on the Shen Sha table.

The Travel Horse appears in both the Month Pillar (申) and the Hour Pillar (申), also derived from the Day Pillar and Year Pillar. The Canopy Star is traditionally associated with solitude, introspection, spiritual or philosophical interests, and a tendency toward isolation or specialized study. With it present in both the Year and Day Pillars, this tendency is rooted in your early family environment and reinforced in your core identity.

You may have felt different or drawn to solitary pursuits from a young age, and this pattern continues into adulthood, often manifesting as a preference for deep focus over social networking. The Travel Horse, located in the Month and Hour Pillars, indicates a dynamic, restless energy related to career and later-life activities. It suggests frequent movement, travel, or changes in work location, and a need for physical or mental mobility to feel engaged.

The combination of Canopy Star and Travel Horse creates a paradox: you need both solitude and movement. You may find yourself alternating between periods of intense withdrawal and sudden travel or career shifts. These markers do not guarantee events but describe tendencies.

The Canopy Star can also indicate talent in arts, research, or esoteric fields, while the Travel Horse supports careers involving logistics, transportation, or international work. Neither marker overrides the chart's core Ten-God structure; they add nuance to how your Indirect Resource and Wealth energies express themselves.

Application

Career and Suitable Work Environments

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your career tendencies are shaped by the dominance of Indirect Resource (偏印) at 41% and the presence of Seven Killings (七杀) at 19% in the hidden stems, combined with the repeated Wealth (Earth) in the branches. The Indirect Resource favors independent, research-oriented, or specialized work where you can operate with autonomy and intellectual depth.

甲 Wood Day Master, interpreted through Ten Gods, the Day Branch, and relevant natal interactions.

You are likely drawn to fields that require analysis, strategy, or unconventional thinking—such as data science, academic research, consulting, writing, or technical roles where you solve problems alone or in small teams. The Seven Killings in the hidden stems add a competitive edge and a tolerance for pressure, suggesting you can handle high-stakes environments like law, finance, or crisis management, but only when you have sufficient Resource support (Water) to manage the stress. The Wealth stars (Earth) in the branches indicate that financial stability is a practical concern, and you may be motivated by tangible results rather than abstract recognition.

However, the lack of visible Fire (Output) means you may struggle with self-promotion or direct sales; your value is better demonstrated through expertise and deliverables rather than charisma. Suitable work environments include those that offer intellectual freedom, minimal micromanagement, and clear performance metrics. Avoid roles that require constant social negotiation or emotional labor, as your chart favors logic over interpersonal dynamics.

The Travel Horse in the Month and Hour Pillars suggests that your career may involve travel, relocation, or a non-traditional work structure like freelancing or remote work. The Canopy Star reinforces the need for quiet, focused spaces. In summary, your career path benefits from depth over breadth, and from environments that respect your need for autonomy and intellectual challenge.

Application

Wealth Pattern and Resource Management

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your Wealth pattern is defined by Indirect Wealth (偏财) at 18% in the hidden stems and Direct Wealth (正财) carried through the Earth branches (戌) in the Year and Day Pillars. The Earth Wealth is present but not dominant in the visible stems, meaning financial opportunities often come through indirect channels—such as investments, side projects, or unexpected sources—rather than a single salary stream.

甲 Wood Day Master, interpreted through Ten Gods, the Day Branch, and relevant natal interactions.

The Indirect Resource (Water) that supports your Day Master also nourishes the Wealth, as Water produces Wood, and Wood controls Earth. This creates a cycle where your intellectual or specialized skills (Resource) can generate wealth, but only if you actively apply them. The lack of visible Fire (Output) means you may not naturally spend or circulate money freely; you tend to accumulate resources cautiously.

The repeated Wealth in the branches suggests that financial stability is tied to your core identity and family background, but it also indicates potential fixed assets like property. However, the Earth branches are not directly controlled by your Day Master Wood in a strong way because the Wood is supported by Water, making it robust enough to handle the Wealth without being overwhelmed. The Seven Killings in the hidden stems add a risk element: you may be drawn to high-reward opportunities but need to guard against impulsive decisions under pressure.

Your financial operating style favors long-term accumulation over quick turnover. You are likely to build wealth through expertise, patents, intellectual property, or niche markets rather than through sales or networking. The Travel Horse suggests that wealth may come from multiple locations or international sources.

A practical action is to maintain a diversified portfolio and avoid over-leveraging on a single venture. The absence of Fire means you should consciously schedule reviews of your financial plans, as you may otherwise neglect active management.

Application

Relationships, Partner Star, and Spouse Palace

CORE INTERPRETATION

In your chart, the partner star for a female is the Direct Officer (正官) and Seven Killings (七杀), which represent Metal. The visible stems contain no Metal, but the hidden stems carry Seven Killings at 19% and Direct Officer at 8%, both located in the Month and Hour branches (申, which contains Geng Metal as a hidden stem).

甲 Wood Day Master, interpreted through Ten Gods, the Day Branch, and relevant natal interactions.

This means relationship potential exists but is not immediately obvious in the outer chart; partners may enter your life through work, travel, or intellectual circles rather than social introductions. The Spouse Palace is the Day Branch, 戊 (Earth), which is your Wealth star. This placement indicates that your partner may be practical, financially stable, or focused on material security.

The Earth branch also contains hidden Fire (Ding) and Metal (Xin), suggesting that your partner may have creative or analytical qualities. However, the repeated 戊 in the Year Pillar creates a fu yin (repeated pillar) with the Spouse Palace, which can indicate a tendency to repeat relationship patterns from your family of origin, or a sense of familiarity that may feel both comfortable and limiting. The Indirect Resource dominance in your chart means you may approach relationships with intellectual detachment, valuing independence and personal space over emotional intensity.

You may need a partner who respects your need for solitude and does not demand constant attention. The Travel Horse in the Month and Hour Pillars suggests that relationships may involve distance, travel, or a non-traditional arrangement. The Canopy Star in the Spouse Palace reinforces a tendency toward late marriage or a partner who is older, more introspective, or involved in specialized work.

No definitive event can be guaranteed, but the pattern suggests that relationships formed in your 30s or later, during the Earth and Fire Luck Pillars, may be more stable. A practical consideration is to communicate your need for autonomy early in a relationship to avoid misunderstandings.

Application

Health Tendencies Through the Five Elements

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your chart shows a structural imbalance where Wood (甲) is the Day Master, but Metal (申) appears twice in the branches and Water (壬) twice in the stems, creating a strong Resource pattern that can overwhelm Wood. The absence of visible Fire (火) means the Wood has no direct outlet to release tension, which may manifest as internalized stress or a tendency to suppress emotions physically.

甲 Wood Day Master, interpreted through Ten Gods, the Day Branch, and relevant natal interactions.

The two Earth branches (戌) in the Year and Day Pillars represent Wealth, but they are controlled by Wood, so digestive or metabolic systems could be sensitive, especially when Earth is drained by Metal in the Month and Hour Branches. Traditional Five-Element theory associates Wood with the liver and gallbladder, Metal with the lungs and skin, and Water with the kidneys and urinary system. The repeated 申 (Metal) branches may indicate a need to monitor respiratory health, such as allergies or seasonal sensitivities, while the strong Water (壬) could relate to fluid retention or kidney energy if overworked.

Since Fire is hidden only in the 戌 branches (as 丁 and 辛), its absence in visible stems suggests that circulation or warmth regulation might be less robust, potentially leading to cold extremities or sluggish metabolism in cooler seasons. These are tendencies, not diagnoses, and lifestyle adjustments like moderate exercise to move Wood energy and avoiding excessive cold or damp environments can support balance. Always consult a medical professional for health concerns.

Luck Pillar Direction and Starting Age

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your Luck Pillars (Da Yun) move in a reverse direction, meaning they cycle backward through the Heavenly Stems and Earthly Branches from the Month Pillar (壬申). This is determined by your gender (female) and the Year Stem (甲), which is Yang Wood.

Luck direction: Reverse. Basis: Female birth in a Yang-stem year.

The rule in BaZi is that a female born in a Yang-stem year follows the reverse path, so your Luck Pillars retreat from 壬申 to 辛未, 庚午, and so on. The starting age is 3, calculated from the distance between your birth date and the preceding solar term (立秋, Start of Autumn) in the reverse direction, though the exact solar-term timestamps are not supplied here. This means your first Luck Pillar, 辛未, began at age 3 in 1997 and lasted until age 12.

The reverse direction is significant because it brings earlier exposure to Metal and Earth elements in your early Luck Pillars (辛未, 庚午), which interact with your natal Wood and Water. As you move into later Luck Pillars like 戊辰 (age 33, 2027) and 丁卯 (age 43, 2037), the elements shift toward Earth and Fire, offering new balancing opportunities. The starting age of 3 is relatively early, meaning your life phases have been shaped by these cycles from childhood.

This timing framework is fixed and should not be recalculated; it provides the structural basis for interpreting your ten-year periods.

- Calculated facts are kept separate from interpretation.

Scope

No single symbol or Shen Sha marker is treated as proof of a fixed event.

Ten-Year Luck Pillars

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your current Luck Pillar is 己巳, which began at age 23 in 2017 and will continue until age 32 in 2026. 己 is Yin Earth (Indirect Wealth), and 巳 is Fire (containing 丙, 戊, 庚).

Current Luck Pillar: 己巳 (2017-2026); annual contacts are shown with their natal or Luck-Pillar source.

This pillar introduces Fire for the first time in your Luck cycle, which is significant because your natal chart has no visible Fire. The Fire in 巳 can help release Wood energy through Output (食伤), potentially easing the tension from the strong Metal-Water Resource pattern. However, 巳 also clashes with your Month and Hour Branches (申), creating a 巳申合 (combination that can turn into Water) or a clash depending on the year.

This means the period from 2017 to 2026 has been marked by shifts in career or personal direction, as the Fire tries to balance the cold Metal-Water influence. The next Luck Pillar, 戊辰, starts at age 33 in 2027 and lasts until age 42. 戊 is Yang Earth (Indirect Wealth), and 辰 is Earth (containing 戊, 乙, 癸).

This pillar strengthens Earth, which is your Wealth element, but Earth also controls Water, potentially reducing the Resource influence. The 辰 branch forms a 辰戌冲 (clash) with your Year and Day Branches (戌), which can stir up foundational changes in home, relationships, or personal identity. This clash is structural and may bring both opportunities and disruptions, so the 2027-2036 period requires careful planning.

The 丁卯 pillar (age 43, 2037) introduces Fire again, offering a more stable Output phase.

Da Yun & Liu
NianAnnual Outlook for the Next Five Years

CORE INTERPRETATION

2026 is 丙午 (Yang Fire on Yang Fire). 丙 is Eating God (食神), and 午 is Fire (containing 丁, 己).

Current Luck Pillar: 己巳 (2017-2026); annual contacts are shown with their natal or Luck-Pillar source.

This year brings strong Fire, which is your Output element, directly addressing the lack of visible Fire in your natal chart. The Fire can help you express ideas, take creative risks, or start new projects, as it releases Wood energy. However, 午 clashes with your Month and Hour Branches (申), creating a 午申克 (Fire controlling Metal), which may challenge your Officer or career structure.

This could mean tension with authority or a need to assert independence at work. 2027 is 丁未 (Yin Fire on Yin Earth). 丁 is Hurting Officer (伤官), and 未 is Earth (containing 己, 丁, 乙).

This year falls in the transition to your 戊辰 Luck Pillar, so the 未 Earth supports Wealth but also forms a 未戌刑 (punishment) with your Year and Day Branches (戌), potentially causing minor disputes or internal friction. 2028 is 戊申 (Yang Earth on Yang Metal). 戊 is Indirect Wealth, and 申 is Metal (Officer).

This year repeats the Month and Hour Branch (申), strengthening Metal and Water, which may increase pressure from responsibilities or health concerns. 2029 is 己酉 (Yin Earth on Yin Metal). 己 is Indirect Wealth, and 酉 is Metal (Direct Officer).

The 酉 branch forms a 酉戌害 (harm) with your Year and Day Branches (戌), suggesting subtle relationship or career obstacles. 2030 is 庚戌 (Yang Metal on Yang Earth). 庚 is Seven Killings (七杀), and 戌 is Wealth.

This year repeats the Year and Day Branch (戌), creating a 戌戌自刑 (self-punishment), which may bring introspection or a need to resolve internal conflicts.

Timing Priorities and Practical Summary

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your chart is dominated by a strong Resource pattern (壬水偏印) and repeated Metal branches (申), which can make you analytical, introspective, and cautious, but also prone to overthinking or emotional withdrawal. The absence of visible Fire means you may struggle to express yourself directly, and the two 戌 Earth branches (Wealth) are controlled by Wood, so financial stability often requires effort to balance.

Current Luck Pillar: 己巳 (2017-2026); annual contacts are shown with their natal or Luck-Pillar source.

The Shen Sha markers—华盖 (Canopy Star) in the Year and Day Pillars (戌) and 驿马 (Travel Horse) in the Month and Hour Pillars (申)—reinforce a tendency toward solitude, spiritual interests, and a restless or mobile lifestyle. The Canopy Star suggests you benefit from periods of quiet reflection or study, while the Travel Horse indicates that movement, travel, or career changes can be productive. Your Luck Pillar transition from 己巳 to 戊辰 in 2027 is a major structural shift, as the 辰戌 clash will activate your Wealth and Officer elements, potentially bringing career or relationship changes.

The next five years (2026-2030) show a mix of Fire (2026-2027) and Metal-Earth (2028-2030) influences. Prioritize 2026 for creative expression or new initiatives, as the Fire can break through the Resource stagnation. From 2028 onward, focus on consolidating resources and managing responsibilities, as the Metal and Earth years may increase pressure.

Avoid overcommitting in 2030, when the 庚戌 Seven Killings and self-punishment suggest a need for caution in decisions. Overall, your timing favors action in Fire years and steady maintenance in Metal-Earth years, with the 2027 transition as a key pivot point.

- Calculated facts are kept separate from interpretation.

Scope

No single symbol or Shen Sha marker is treated as proof of a fixed event.

Calculation basis and reading limits

This report was generated by Tengyunzi's AI interpretation system from calculated chart data. It is not represented as a report written personally by Tengyunzi.

The report follows standard BaZi order: season and Day Master strength first, then Five Elements, Ten Gods, chart structure, life topics, and timing. Interpretation remains conditional rather than a guarantee of events. The recorded birth time of 16:00 is included, so the Hour Pillar is part of the structural analysis.
