Percentages use largest-remainder rounding and total exactly 100%. Visible counts come from non-Day stems; hidden scores use weighted branch roots. This is a technical distribution index for the natal chart.

神煞 / SHEN SHA

Markers that add nuance, not fixed outcomes

Each marker is calculated from the natal stems and branches. It is interpreted as supporting context and never overrides the Day Master, Five Elements, or Ten-God structure.

MARKER	LOCATION	DERIVED FROM	PRACTICAL INTERPRETATION
华盖 Canopy Star	2 PLACEMENTS YEAR 戌 · DAY 戌	Day Pillar + Year Pillar	Supports specialist depth, solitude, aesthetics, and the ability to work beyond conventional opinion. Repetition increases emphasis across life contexts.
驿马 Travel Horse	2 PLACEMENTS MONTH 申 · HOUR 申	Day Pillar + Year Pillar	Adds momentum through movement, changing environments, travel, or roles that resist stagnation. Repetition increases emphasis across life contexts.

How to read this page

A marker describes a recurring symbolic tendency. Repetition can strengthen emphasis, but no single Shen Sha guarantees an event, relationship, or outcome.

01

Structure

Four Pillars and Day Master

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your Four Pillars are 甲戌 (Wood-Earth), 壬申 (Water-Metal), 甲戌 (Wood-Earth), and 壬申 (Water-Metal). The Day Master, or the stem representing your core self, is 甲 (Yang Wood).

Chart basis

Day Master: 甲, a Wood Heavenly Stem. Day Pillar and Day Master are kept distinct.

Yang Wood is the tall tree, the pillar, the straight trunk that seeks upward growth and resists bending. In your chart, the Day Master appears twice: once in the Year Pillar and once in the Day Pillar. This repetition gives your personality a strong, self-reliant quality, but it also means you may face internal competition or a need to assert your identity repeatedly.

The Year Pillar represents your early environment and family background, the Month Pillar your career and social sphere, the Day Pillar your self and marriage, and the Hour Pillar your later years and inner drive. With two 甲 Wood stems and two 壬 Water stems, your chart is dominated by the Wood and Water elements, which together create a pattern of self-sufficiency and intellectual depth.

Scope

Structure

Seasonal Qi and Day Master Strength

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your Month Pillar is 申 (Metal), which corresponds to the eighth month of the lunar calendar, a period of autumn when Metal Qi is strong. Metal controls Wood, so the season itself is not naturally supportive of your Day Master.

Month Branch: 申; strength is read through season, roots, support, drains, and controls.

However, your chart contains two 壬 Water stems (Indirect Resource) that sit in the Month and Hour Pillars. Water produces Wood in the Five-Element cycle, so these Water stems act as a vital source of nourishment for your Day Master. Additionally, the Earth branches 戌 (Earth) in the Year and Day Pillars are controlled by Wood, meaning they do not directly weaken you but rather represent areas where you expend energy.

Your Day Master has no same-element root in any Earthly Branch, meaning you lack a strong physical or emotional anchor in the chart. This makes you reliant on the Water Resource for strength. Overall, your Day Master is moderately strong due to the Water support, but it is not overwhelmingly robust, and it faces pressure from the seasonal Metal and the Earth branches.

Structure

Five Elements and Hidden Stems

CORE INTERPRETATION

The visible elements in your chart are Wood (2 stems), Water (2 stems), Earth (2 branches), and Metal (2 branches). Fire is not visible in any stem or branch base element.

Chart basis

Visible leaders: Wood + Earth + Metal + Water. Hidden-only elements: Fire.

Hidden stems, which are the energies stored within Earthly Branches, add nuance. The 戌 (Earth) branches contain hidden Metal and Fire, and the 申 (Metal) branches contain hidden Water and Wood. This means Fire exists only in hidden form, not as a visible force.

The combined element totals, which include both visible stems and branch base elements, show Wood=2, Fire=0, Earth=2, Metal=2, Water=2.

However, the hidden Fire in 戌 is a subtle presence that can emerge in certain years or Luck Pillars. The absence of visible Fire means your Output star, which represents expression, creativity, and visible achievement, is not directly activated in your natal chart.

You may find that your ideas and talents require external triggers to manifest. The hidden Water in 申 reinforces your Resource, while the hidden Metal in 戌 adds a layer of authority or discipline that is not immediately obvious.

Scope

04

Structure

Ten Gods in the Natal Chart

CORE INTERPRETATION

The Ten Gods map your relationship to the world through the Five Elements. Your Day Master is 甲 Wood.

Canonical weighted Ten-God leaders: Indirect Resource 41%, Seven Killings 19%, Indirect Wealth 18%. Visible and hidden sources are listed separately.

The visible Ten Gods are: Year Stem 甲 (Friend/Peer), Month Stem 壬 (Indirect Resource), and Hour Stem 壬 (Indirect Resource). The canonical weighted profile shows Indirect Resource at 41%, Seven Killings at 19%, Indirect Wealth at 18%, Friend at 12%, Direct Officer at 8%, and Hurting Officer at 2%. The dominance of Indirect Resource means you are naturally introspective, analytical, and drawn to unconventional knowledge or spiritual pursuits.

You may prefer to learn through observation and inner reflection rather than formal instruction. The significant Seven Killings and Indirect Wealth in hidden stems indicate that authority, risk, and financial management are important but operate beneath the surface. You may encounter competitive or challenging situations that force you to develop resilience.

The low Hurting Officer suggests you are not naturally rebellious or outspoken, but you can become critical when your ideas are dismissed. The Friend star appears only in the Year Pillar, hinting that early peer relationships shaped your sense of self.

Evidence

Chart Structure, Useful Elements, and Unfavorable Elements

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your chart forms a pattern where Water (Resource) supports Wood (Day Master), while Metal (Officer) and Earth (Wealth) create pressure. The seasonal Qi of autumn Metal is unfavorable because it controls Wood, but the two Water stems mitigate this by producing Wood.

Useful and unfavorable elements must follow the stated strength and balancing logic; they are not inferred from a simple missing-element count.

The provisional useful element is Water, as it strengthens your Day Master and allows you to handle the Metal and Earth pressures. Fire, though absent, could be useful in small amounts to regulate the cold Water and to express your hidden creativity, but too much Fire would drain Wood and clash with the Water Resource. Metal is unfavorable because it directly controls Wood, and Earth is unfavorable because Wood must expend energy to control it, which can lead to exhaustion.

The structural challenge is that your Day Master lacks a root, making you sensitive to environmental changes. In practice, this means you thrive in environments that provide intellectual stimulation and emotional support (Water), while you struggle in overly structured or demanding settings (Metal and Earth). A balanced approach involves seeking roles that allow independent thought and gradual growth rather than rapid advancement under pressure.

Evidence

Stems, Branches, and Natal Interactions

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your natal chart contains no stem combinations, clashes, or harmonies among the visible stems. The four stems are 甲 (Wood), 壬 (Water), 甲 (Wood), and 壬 (Water).

Only exact supported stem and branch relations are reported; repeats are not treated as two-member combinations.

Water and Wood share a generating relationship, but no formal combination or clash exists between them. This absence of stem interactions means your chart's energy flows without immediate structural tension at the stem level, allowing the branch-level dynamics to dominate. The Earthly Branches show a significant pattern: two 戌 (Earth) and two 申 (Metal).

The 戌 branches in the Year and Day Pillars are identical, creating a repeated branch structure. This repetition amplifies the Earth element's presence, reinforcing the Wealth star (Earth) in your chart. The 申 branches in the Month and Hour Pillars are also identical, doubling the Metal element and strengthening the Officer star (Metal).

This double repetition of both Earth and Metal creates a stable but heavy structural emphasis on control and resource management. There is no formal combination, clash, harm, break, punishment, or meeting among the branches in your natal chart. The 戌 and 申 branches do not combine or clash directly.

The absence of these interactions means your chart lacks external triggers for sudden change or conflict from the natal structure alone. However, the repeated branches create internal pressure: the double Earth demands constant effort from your Wood Day Master, and the double Metal exerts control over you. This pattern suggests a life where stability comes from managing dual responsibilities, but the lack of dynamic interactions may also mean that change requires external timing from Luck Pillars or annual cycles to activate movement.

Evidence

Shen Sha: Secondary Symbolic Stars

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your chart carries two canonical Shen Sha markers: 华盖 (Canopy Star) and 驿马 (Travel Horse). The Canopy Star appears in both the Year Pillar 戌 and the Day Pillar 戌, derived from the Day Pillar and Year Pillar combination.

The Travel Horse appears in both the Month Pillar 申 and the Hour Pillar 申, also derived from the Day Pillar and Year Pillar. These markers are secondary to the main structure but add symbolic tendencies. The Canopy Star is traditionally associated with solitude, introspection, and a connection to spiritual or philosophical pursuits.

With two Canopy markers in your chart, you may have a natural inclination toward deep thinking, privacy, or periods of withdrawal from social circles. This star often appears in charts of scholars, artists, or those who value inner reflection over external validation. In practice, you might find that you need alone time to recharge and that you are drawn to subjects like religion, metaphysics, or creative work that requires focus.

However, the Canopy Star does not guarantee isolation; it simply suggests that you function well when you have space for contemplation. The Travel Horse star is linked to movement, travel, and restlessness. With two Travel Horse markers, you may experience frequent changes in location, career shifts, or a strong desire for exploration.

This star can manifest as physical travel, job transfers, or mental restlessness that pushes you to seek new experiences. In your chart, the Travel Horse in the Month and Hour Pillars suggests that career and daily activities may involve mobility or that you thrive in environments requiring adaptability. Combined with the Canopy Star, you have a dual tendency: a need for stability and reflection alongside a drive for movement and change.

These markers are tendencies, not predictions, and their expression depends on your life circumstances.

Application

Career and Suitable Work Environments

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your career tendencies are shaped by the strong presence of Indirect Resource (Water) and Seven Killings (Metal) in your chart, with a supporting structure of Indirect Wealth (Earth). The Indirect Resource, represented by the two 壬 (Water) stems in the Month and Hour Pillars, gives you a sharp, analytical mind that learns through observation and independent study rather than formal instruction.

甲 Wood Day Master, interpreted through Ten Gods, the Day Branch, and relevant natal interactions.

You are likely to excel in fields that require research, strategy, or technical expertise, such as data analysis, engineering, consulting, or academia. The Seven Killings, carried in the hidden stems of the 甲 branches, add a competitive edge and a willingness to take calculated risks. This combination suggests a career where you can work autonomously, solve complex problems, and handle pressure without constant supervision.

The double Earth Wealth stars in the Year and Day Branches indicate that financial reward comes through effort and control. You are not someone who waits for opportunities; you create them through hard work and persistence. The absence of visible Fire (Output) means you may not naturally seek the spotlight or rely on creative expression for career advancement.

Instead, you prefer behind-the-scenes roles where your competence speaks for itself. Suitable work environments include those that value depth over breadth, such as specialized technical teams, research labs, or independent consulting practices. Avoid roles that require constant social networking or rapid public presentation, as these may drain your energy.

The Travel Horse star in the Month and Hour Pillars suggests that your career may involve travel, relocation, or frequent changes in projects. You might thrive in roles that require adaptability, such as project management in global companies, field research, or roles with rotational assignments. The Canopy Star in the Year and Day Pillars indicates that you also need periods of focused, solitary work to maintain productivity.

A hybrid environment—combining independent deep work with periodic mobility—would suit you best. Your career path is likely nonlinear, with shifts every few years as you seek new challenges.

Application

Wealth Pattern and Resource Management

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your wealth pattern is dominated by Indirect Wealth (Earth), represented by the two 戌 branches in the Year and Day Pillars. Indirect Wealth is associated with income from non-salary sources, such as business, investments, commissions, or entrepreneurial ventures.

甲 Wood Day Master, interpreted through Ten Gods, the Day Branch, and relevant natal interactions.

The double Earth indicates that you have the potential to generate wealth through effort and control, but the Wood Day Master must expend energy to manage this Earth. You are not someone who inherits wealth or receives it passively; you build it through active work and strategic decisions. The absence of visible Fire means you lack a direct Output channel to express creativity or attract opportunities, so your wealth accumulation relies on persistence and analytical planning rather than charisma or luck.

The Indirect Resource (Water) supports your wealth pattern by providing the intellectual tools to identify opportunities and manage risks. The two 壬 stems give you a strategic mindset, allowing you to calculate returns and avoid impulsive financial moves. However, the strong Metal (Officer) in the 甲 branches can create pressure to follow rules or conform to external expectations, which may conflict with the entrepreneurial nature of Indirect Wealth.

You may need to balance caution with calculated risk-taking. The double Earth also suggests that you may hold multiple income streams or assets, but managing them requires discipline to avoid overextension. Your financial operating style favors long-term accumulation over quick gains.

You are likely to prefer investments in tangible assets, such as real estate or established businesses, rather than speculative ventures. The Travel Horse star suggests that your wealth may come from locations or industries that require mobility, such as international trade or logistics. The Canopy Star indicates that you may keep your financial strategies private and prefer to work alone or with a small trusted team.

Avoid partnerships where you lack control, as the double Earth can attract others who want to share your resources. Your wealth grows steadily when you focus on one area at a time and avoid spreading yourself too thin.

Application

Relationships, Partner Star, and Spouse Palace

CORE INTERPRETATION

In your chart, the partner star for a female is the Direct Officer (Metal), which represents the husband or long-term partner. The Direct Officer is not visible in the stems but is carried in the hidden stems of the 申 branches in the Month and Hour Pillars.

甲 Wood Day Master, interpreted through Ten Gods, the Day Branch, and relevant natal interactions.

This placement indicates that your partner may be someone you meet through work, travel, or structured environments, rather than through social circles or chance encounters. The hidden nature of the Officer star suggests that relationships may develop slowly or require effort to bring to the surface. You are not someone who attracts partners easily through charm alone; instead, relationships form when you are engaged in purposeful activities.

The Spouse Palace is the Day Branch, which is 戌 (Earth). Earth is your Wealth star, and in the context of relationships, this suggests that your partner may be practical, grounded, and focused on material stability. The 戌 branch is also a Canopy Star, indicating that your partner may have a philosophical or introspective side, or that the relationship itself requires periods of solitude and reflection.

The double 戌 in the Year and Day Pillars means that family background and your own relationship patterns may share similar themes, such as a focus on duty or financial management. However, the Earth branch also controls your Wood Day Master, meaning that the relationship may require you to compromise or adapt to your partner's more structured nature. The absence of visible Fire (Output) in your chart means you may not express emotions openly in relationships.

You are more likely to show love through actions and reliability than through words or gestures. The strong Water (Resource) can make you overly analytical about relationships, potentially overthinking compatibility or future outcomes. The Travel Horse star in the Month and Hour Pillars suggests that relationships may involve distance, travel, or changes in location.

You may need a partner who respects your need for independence and intellectual space. The pattern points to a relationship that is built on mutual respect and shared goals rather than intense emotional drama, but it also requires conscious effort to maintain emotional connection.

Health Tendencies Through the Five Elements

CORE INTERPRETATION

Traditional BaZi associates the Five Elements with broad bodily systems: Wood with the liver, gallbladder, tendons, and eyes; Fire with the heart and circulation; Earth with the spleen, stomach, and muscles; Metal with the lungs and skin; and Water with the kidneys and urinary system. These are historical correspondence categories used to describe elemental balance.

Chart basis

甲 Wood Day Master, interpreted through Ten Gods, the Day Branch, and relevant natal interactions.

They are not medical findings and do not identify a symptom, diagnosis, constitution, or future illness. The chart evidence should therefore be read structurally. The Day Master is 甲 Wood.

Elements represented in the pillar stems or branch base elements are Wood, Earth, Metal, Water. Elements found only among hidden stems are Fire, while elements not represented in the supplied chart are none. This distinction matters because a hidden-only element is present but less exposed; it must not be described as completely absent.

In a standard BaZi reading, this section is limited to observing whether elemental functions are concentrated, restrained, supported, or underrepresented in the natal structure and later timing cycles. It does not convert those patterns into claims about the reader's organs, energy level, digestion, sleep, mood, fertility, or disease risk. Luck Pillars and annual years may change which element is emphasized, but they still do not provide a medical forecast.

Use this chapter as a record of traditional Five-Element correspondence only. Personal health decisions should be based on qualified healthcare assessment rather than a BaZi chart.

Luck Pillar Direction and Starting Age

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your Luck Pillars (Da Yun) move in reverse direction. This is determined by the rule for a female born in a Yang-stem year: the Year Stem 甲 is Yang Wood, so the Luck Pillar count proceeds backward through the Heavenly Stems and Earthly Branches from the Month Pillar 壬申.

Luck direction: Reverse. Basis: Female birth in a Yang-stem year.

The starting age for your first Luck Pillar is 3 years old, as supplied by the calculator. This means your first Luck Pillar, 辛未, began at age 3 in 1997. The reverse direction indicates that your life phases unfold by revisiting and refining earlier themes rather than moving linearly forward.

Each Luck Pillar represents a ten-year period that interacts with your natal chart, shifting the balance of elements and Ten Gods. The starting age is a fixed reference point; it does not imply early maturity or delay. In practice, reverse Luck Pillars often bring lessons that circle back to foundational issues—family, early education, or core habits—before expanding outward.

The current Luck Pillar 己巳 (Earth-Fire) runs from age 23 (2017) to age 32 (2026), and the next Luck Pillar 戊辰 (Earth-Earth) begins at age 33 in 2027. Understanding the direction helps you anticipate whether each decade will feel like building on the past or reworking it.

Ten-Year Luck Pillars

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your Luck Pillars begin with 辛未 (Metal-Earth) from age 3 to 12 (1997–2006). Metal (辛) is Direct Officer, which controls your Wood Day Master, and Earth (未) is Wealth.

This period likely emphasized structure, rules, and early responsibilities, possibly through education or family expectations. The next pillar, 庚午 (Metal-Fire), from age 13 to 22 (2007–2016), brought Seven Killings (庚) and Fire (午) as Output. Seven Killings can create pressure or competition, while Fire releases Wood energy, encouraging self-expression and social activity.

The current pillar, 己巳 (Earth-Fire), from age 23 to 32 (2017–2026), features Direct Wealth (己) and Fire (巳) as Output. This decade focuses on building tangible value—career, income, or skills—through effort and creativity. The Fire in 巳 helps release Wood's pent-up energy, but the Earth Wealth can feel heavy to control.

The next pillar, 戊辰 (Earth-Earth), from age 33 to 42 (2027–2036), is pure Earth Wealth. This will intensify the demand on your Wood Day Master to manage resources, finances, and responsibilities. Without strong Fire or Water support, you may feel overextended.

The structural marker 2000 庚辰 (Metal-Earth) at age 6 emphasized a year of discipline and challenge, likely tied to school or family structure. The marker 2060 庚辰 at age 66 suggests a later phase where similar themes of authority and resource management recur.

Da Yun & Liu
NianAnnual Outlook for the Next Five Years

CORE INTERPRETATION

2026 (丙午, Fire-Fire) falls in the last year of the 己巳 Luck Pillar. The stem 丙 (Output) clashes with your natal month and hour stems 壬 (Resource), creating tension between self-expression and inner reflection.

Chart basis

The branch 午 (Fire) forms a Half Harmony with your natal 戌 (Earth) branches, supporting Output and Wealth. This year favors creative projects and financial initiatives, but the clash may cause sudden changes in routine or communication. Stay flexible and avoid overcommitting.

2027 (丁未, Fire-Earth) begins the 戊辰 Luck Pillar. The stem 丁 (Output) combines with your natal month and hour stems 壬 (Resource), blending creativity with intuition. The branch 未 (Earth) breaks and punishes your natal 戌 (Earth) branches, indicating friction in relationships or resource management.

This is a year to stabilize finances and resolve lingering disputes. 2028 (戊申, Earth-Metal) repeats your natal month and hour branches 申 (Metal), intensifying Officer and Seven Killings pressure. The Earth stem 戊 (Wealth) adds responsibility.

You may face increased work demands or authority figures. Prioritize boundaries and avoid overwork. 2029 (己酉, Earth-Metal) brings a Six Harm between 酉 (Metal) and your natal 戌 (Earth), softening the Metal control.

The stem 己 (Wealth) combines with your natal 甲 (Wood) stems, aligning effort with reward. This is a favorable year for career advancement or financial planning. 2030 (庚戌, Metal-Earth) clashes your natal 甲 (Wood) stems with 庚 (Seven Killings), and repeats your natal 戌 (Earth) branches.

This signals a year of challenge and transformation. Expect pressure from authority or competition. Use the 戊辰 Luck Pillar's Earth to ground yourself and avoid impulsive decisions.

Timing Priorities and Practical Summary

CORE INTERPRETATION

Your chart's core pattern is a Wood Day Master supported by two Water Resources but lacking Fire to release energy and facing strong Metal control from the Month and Hour branches. The Ten-God profile is dominated by Indirect Resource (41%), which favors deep thinking, research, and independent work, but can lead to overthinking or isolation.

The Seven Killings (19%) and Indirect Wealth (18%) add pressure and ambition. The Shen Sha markers—Canopy Star (华盖) in Year and Day pillars—indicate a tendency toward introspection, spirituality, or solitude, while Travel Horse (驿马) in Month and Hour pillars suggests movement, travel, or career changes. These symbolic stars reinforce the need for balance between inner focus and external action.

Timing priorities: The current 己巳 Luck Pillar (2017–2026) has been a productive phase for building skills and income through Fire Output. As you approach the 戊辰 Luck Pillar (2027–2036), the focus shifts to managing Earth Wealth, which can feel heavy. The next five years show a mix of opportunity and pressure: 2026 offers creative momentum, 2027 requires conflict resolution, 2028 demands resilience, 2029 brings reward, and 2030 tests your limits.

The structural marker 2000 庚辰 suggests that disciplined periods recur; 2028 and 2030 carry similar themes. Practically, advance during Fire-rich years (2026–2027) by taking initiative and networking. Stay steady during Metal-rich years (2028, 2030) by protecting your health and avoiding overcommitment.

Protect resources during Earth-heavy phases (2027, 2029) by budgeting and delegating. Your chart rewards patience, structured effort, and periodic retreat for reflection.

Reading standard

- Traditional BaZi terms are retained and explained in English.
- Calculated facts are kept separate from interpretation.

Scope

No single symbol or Shen Sha marker is treated as proof of a fixed event.

Calculation basis and reading limits

This report was generated by Tengyunzi's AI interpretation system from calculated chart data. It is not represented as a report written personally by Tengyunzi.

The report follows standard BaZi order: season and Day Master strength first, then Five Elements, Ten Gods, chart structure, life topics, and timing. Interpretation remains conditional rather than a guarantee of events. The recorded birth time of 16:00 is included, so the Hour Pillar is part of the structural analysis.

01 Birth input

Gregorian civil date · Asia/Taipei · birthplace not supplied

02 Chart source

Four Pillars and Luck Pillars supplied by the Tengyunzi calculation engine; solar-time correction is not applied without birthplace data.

03 Ten-God weighting

Visible non-Day stems weight 1.0. Hidden branch stems use 60/30/10 weighting, adjusted by pillar position.

04 Shen Sha scope

Supported canonical markers only. They remain secondary to Day Master, Five Elements, and Ten-God structure.

Important

This report is for educational and reflective purposes. It is not medical, legal, financial, or mental-health advice, and it does not guarantee future events.
